ARCHAEOLOGY

SPRINGFIELD IRON WORKS: HISTORIC LITHOGRAPH (LEFT) AND EXISTING CONDITION AT SITE (ABOVE)

A given survey area can contain a diverse range of cultural resources within them, including single and multiple family housing, commercial and industrial properties, institutional buildings, as well as transportation and utility structures related to the city's infrastructure. Less visible, but equally significant, are the archaeological resources that may be present. These various property types illustrate the character and evolution of their associated neighborhoods and city landscapes through time.
